100 Americans Among the Guests at Buckingham Palace, Marking Climax of London Social Season

LONDON, July 21 (By The Associated Press) .- London's social season reached its climax this afternoon with a royal garden party—the largest ever held at Buckingham Palace. There were 10,000 guests, at least 100 of them Americans. All classes were repre-sented, including statesmen, diplomats, bishops, dukes, field marshaps, ad-mirals, labor leaders, actresses, artists and scientists. and scientists.

and scientists.

King George and Queen Mary walked about, mingling with the guests like ordinary hosts. They had tea in a special marquee with other members of the royal family and a few friends.

The guests came from all parts of the British Empire. Every member of the House of Commons, together with wife and grown-up daughters, was commanded to attend. For the first time in history the invitations to this function were marked R. S. V. P. The precaution was in the interest of econrecaution was in the interest of econ omy, to determine in advance the size of the company and prevent wastage of refreshments.
